Sid is also survived by Bella, his dog. Recently Sid reunited with his biological dad, Charles Brown of Midwest City, Oklahoma. Sid will be missed by the many whose lives were impacted by him, including nieces, nephews, a host of extended family and a multitude of friends and neighbors dear to him.

Sid was preceded in death by his father, Reed O. Hunt.

“Jan, my heart goes out to you and prayers for comfort, strength and understanding. One memories that Sid used to tease me about was the time Reed O caught Sid trying to steal a kiss from me from behind the wood pile. We have laughed about that for many years. Think we were about 7 or 8. Pray that you stay strong.

“*Jan, Frankie, and family:
I cannot express in words what I want to convey. My prayers and sympathy are extended to each of you.
The service was beautiful...a fitting tribute for a great guy. When the first song, "I've Never been this Homesick" started, a flood of memories filled my soul. It was just last week that I was reminded of the song, "That I Could Still Go Free" and remembered the quartet singing it together with Sid carrying the lead. What I would give to go back and relive just one of those singings. Sid now is FREE and his homesickness is over. Someday we will join him and sing together again around the throne. God bless you and keep you.*
